His Excellency Xi Jinping
President of the People's Republic of China
Zhongnanhai, Xicheng District
Beijing, People's Republic of China

Dear President Xi,

We write to you as families in the United States who have been lovingly waiting to welcome children from China into our homes. These children have already been matched with parents who long to provide them with love, stability, and a bright future. Their bedrooms are ready, their siblings wait eagerly, and their parents dream of the day when they will finally hold them in their arms.

For decades, the people of our two nations have shared a deep bond through intercountry adoption. These children have grown up cherishing both their Chinese heritage and their American homes, serving as living symbols of friendship between our countries.

Today, we humbly ask for your help in continuing that legacy. By allowing the pending adoptions to be finalized, you can help unite waiting children with their families and demonstrate China's enduring commitment to the well-being of vulnerable children. This act of compassion would touch countless hearts around the world and stand as a powerful example of leadership guided by kindness and humanity.

President Xi, we hope that, together with President Trump, you will help make possible a moment the world will never forget, children running into the arms of their parents at last. These reunions would be a testament to the shared values of love, family, and hope that transcend borders.

With profound respect and gratitude,
